Utah In Review 1981

Utah's financial picture took on a brigher hue in 1981, as the 1980-81 fiscal year ended with a $24.3 million balance on hand in the combined general fund-uniform school fund. This situation was particularly pleasing in view of concern earlier in the year that the state might be headed for a year-end deficit. The upturn in 1981 followed two years during which the state dealt with serious fiscal problems.

A factor in the 1981 financial turn-around was the 3.5% cutback in state appropriations ordered by the Legislature meeting in special session in December, 1980. The Legislature's action raised by 1% the Governor's recommendation for a 2.5% cut, and extended the area of the Governor's recommended cut-back to cover state aid to local schools. In addition, the Legislature repealed legislation which would have provided taxpayers with a general property tax rebate in fiscal 1981.

A larger factor in the improved state fiscal picture appeared to be the sharp upturn in state revenue collections in the April-June quarter of 1981. This acceleration in state revenue collections resulted in total tax collections for the year ended June 30, 1981 being $24.6 million higher than the Legislature's estimate made in March.

The vigorous recovery of some sectors of the state economy in mid- and late-1981 provided another illustration of Utah's historic tendency to emerge from economic recessions sooner than most other areas of the nation. This tendency has been notably in evidence in each of the economic downturns since World War II. However, with many economic indicators still pointing downward and a number of economists predicting a continuation of the recession on the national level for at least several months, Utah budget planners were cautious in assessing the fiscal outlook for 1982. Slowdowns in revenue collection early in 1982 reinforced the feeling of caution, but without raising serious concerns for the state's fiscal stability.

Utah's 1981 Legislature, which increased rates of some minor taxes but left major tax rates untouched, estimated there will be a $15 million balance in the general fund-uniform school fund at the end of the current fiscal period on June 30, 1982. If the economic recession should grow worse, the fiscal situation could change by the end of the fiscal year.

EDUCATION

Education continued to be the number one area of public expenditure in Utah during 1981, accounting for almost 42% of all state spending and for 48% of combined state and local government expenditures.

Nearly a billion dollars—$989.8 million—was spent for educational purposes by state and local governments in Utah during the year. This included support for both the public schools and the publicly-supported higher institutions, plus operation of the State Office of Education and a number of special educational programs. It does not include any money for private educational institutions such as Brigham Young University, Westminster College, or parochial schools at elementary and secondary levels.

The state of Utah expended $666.8 million for education, a little less than one-third of it for the higher institutions and the larger share for the public schools, administrative costs, and the relatively small special programs. This item of state spending represented 41.8% of the total state budget; social services, second-largest area of state spending, accounted for 27.9% of the budget, and transportation expenditures for 13.1%.

Total outlays for education in Utah, both state and local, were 7.6% higher in the 1980-81 school year than in the previous year. However as a percent of Utah personal income, spending for education dropped from 9.23% in 1979-80 to 8.84% in 1980-81.

Fall enrollments in Utah public schools in 1981 numbered 354,540, up by 11,655 students or 3.4% over the 1980 fall count. Granite School District, largest in the state, showed a 2.5% enrollment increase in 1981, after registering a slight decline in enrollment over the 1970-1980 decade. Jordan District, second-largest in the state and one of the fastest-growing, recorded a 4.2% increase in 1981, which indicated some levelling off after an average annual increase of 7.25% from 1970 to 1980.

Enrollment at Utah's publicly-supported colleges, including technical colleges, was 61,352 in the fall of 1981, the highest of any year in Utah history. However, while resident enrollment at the colleges was up more than 2,000 over the previous year, nonresident enrollment was 278 below that of 1980.

Enrollment at the publicly-supported academic colleges numbered 50,028 in 1981, representing 81.5% of the total. The remainder of the students were attending the two technical colleges, 6,383 students on the Salt Lake campus and 4,941 at Provo.

More than 28,000 additional college students were enrolled in Utah in the fall of 1981, at the two privately-supported institutions: 26,986 at Brigham Young University in Provo, and 1,355 at Westminster College in Salt Lake.

TRANSPORTATION

Utah expenditure for highway purposes was $184.6 million during 1981, well below the 1980 figure of $197.3 million, but higher than that of any other year in the state's history.

Highway spending in both 1980 and 1981 was inflated significantly by federal interstate "discretionary" funds allocated to Utah in 1979. Discretionary funds are given to states with ready-to-go programs that can put the money to immediate use. Although the money was obligated in 1979, much of it was not actually expended until 1980 and 1981, due to normal construction schedules.

Utah also received some interstate discretionary money in 1980 and 1981. However, under terms of a federal policy used during the Nixon administration and revived in 1980, this money cannot be used immediately unless an equal amount is withheld from other highway projects. The objective of the policy is to restrain the climb of inflation. The extra money will all eventually be used by the states, but does not augment the total available for highway construction in the current year.

Much of Utah's 1981 highway money came from the two-cents-a-gallon increase in the motor fuels tax approved by the 1981 Legislature.

Utah opened 23 additional interstate miles to traffic in 1981. The state now has 791 of its authorized 937 interstate miles open to traffic, although some open stretches are not yet built to full interstate standards. Utah has 84% of its authorized interstate system completed and open, compared to 95% of the interstate system in use across the nation. Utah lags in the percent of miles completed due to the state's policy of completing the most complicated and costly urban stretches of highway first, and leaving until last the lower-cost rural mileage.

PUBLIC WELFARE

Utah expenditures for public welfare rose dramatically in 1981, the rise at least in part reflecting the results of the economic recession.

State expenditures for welfare came to $171.7 million in 1981, compared to $134.7 million in 1980 and to $67.5 million in 1975.

Medical assistance accounted for $105.4 million (61%) of total 1981 Utah welfare spending, while $51.6 million (30% of the total) went into the aid to families with dependent children program. However, the largest percentage increase in 1981 came in the general assistance program, which is financed wholly from state funds, and receives no federal participation. Expenditures for general assistance in 1981 were $14.6 million, 90% above the 1980 figure and 6.4 times Utah's outlay for general assistance in 1975.

Welfare assistance was provided to 62,189 individuals in Utah in 1981, 69% of the total number being helped through the aid to families with dependent children program, and 29% receiving medical assistance only. It should be noted that this total does not include the old-age assistance, the aid to the disabled, and the aid to the blind programs, which are administered directly by the federal government.

POPULATION

Between 1970 and 1980, Utah's population grew by 402,000 persons or 38%. Approximately 256,000 of this growth resulted from natural increase (births over deaths), with the remaining 146,000 coming from in-migration. This was the largest influx of new population in Utah's history, and exceeded the total migration to Utah between 1847 and 1910, which included all of the early pioneer migrations.

While the population growth continued in Utah during 1981, the increase was somewhat less than that experienced over the past decade. First, there was some slowdown in the in-migration of new families to Utah during the past year. There still was a net in-migration of population to Utah in 1981, but the rate was below that of the past few years.

In addition, there are some indications that the rising birth rate in Utah is beginning to peak. For the first time in a decade, the number of live births declined slightly last year. It still is too early to tell whether this decline was a temporary aberration or the beginning of a new downward trend in the number of children born in Utah.

Despite the slowdown in the two main population growth factors—migration and births—Utah's population is continuing to grow. The Utah Population Work Committee estimated that the total Utah population on July 1, 1981, was 1,520,000 up by 46,000 or 3.1% from the July 1, 1980 estimate. It is expected that the Utah population will continue to increase throughout the 1980s, but at a somewhat slower rate than that experienced during the 1970s. Between 1970 and 1980, Utah had the fifth fastest population growth rate in the nation.

COST OF LIVING

The consumer price index (CPI), the United States' most widely-used measure of inflation, rose 8.9% from December, 1980 and December, 1981. This marked the first time in three years that the annual percentage increase in the CPI was a single-digit figure. From December, 1979 to December, 1980 the CPI rose 12.4% and the rise from December, 1978 to December, 1979 was 13.3%.

The impact of inflation varied considerably among different sectors of the economy in 1981 and over recent years. The 1981 average* for the all-items CPI was 272.9 (1967=100), up 10.6% from the 1980 average, and 69.3% over the average for 1975. The 1981 index for fuel oil and coal was 680.0 (1967=100), almost 2½ times the all-item index. The fuel oil and coal index rose 22.3% from 1980 to 1981, and 189.0% between 1975 and 1981.

Other components where the inflationary rise was faster than that of the all-items index included home ownership, with a 1981 index of 322.7, which was 12.8% above the 1980 figure and 92.3% over that for 1975; and public transportation, where the 1981 index was 313.5, up 24.6% over 1980 and 109.3% over 1975.

The inflationary rise in some components in 1981 was less than for the all-items average. The 1981 index for the apparel and upkeep component was 185.3, up only 3.9% over the 1980 index and 30.2% over that for 1975.

* Figures released by the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics for CPI components in 1981 were not complete to the end of the year; a mid-year estimate of the annual index was obtained by averaging the indexes for June and July of 1981. Annual figures for other years, used in comparisons, are averages for the entire 12 months.

PERSONAL INCOME

Personal income in Utah in 1981 was an estimated $12.55 billion, or $8,310 per capita. The per capita figure was 79.4% of the average personal income for the United States of $10,466.

Gross personal income was up 12.2% in Utah in 1981 over 1980, compared to an 11.0% increase for the U.S. In Utah, per capita income rose 8.6% in 1981, and in the U.S. the rise was 9.9%. The higher-than-U.S.-average in Utah's total personal income and lower-than-average rise in per capita income reflects Utah's above-average growth in population in the year.

Utah's rank was 45th among the 50 states in terms of per capita income in 1980, one step higher than the position Utah occupied in 1979. Utah's rank in per capita personal income has been 40th or more since 1971, when the state ranked 39th. The highest rank Utah ever attained in per capita personal income was 29th during the early 1960s and in several earlier years.

In 1980, Carbon County had the highest average per capita personal income in Utah, 23% above the state average. Following Carbon came Garfield, Grand, Salt Lake, Summit, and Weber counties. Wayne County had the lowest per capita income, 38% below the average for the state.

Twenty-seven percent of Utah's personal income in 1980 came from government sources, federal, state, and local; 73% was derived from the private sector. In all of the United States, 75.3% of all personal income came from the private sector, 24.7% from government.

NOTE: Detail may not add to totals because of rounding.

* Amount given is for two quarters or less.

Because of the delay in remitting the sales tax to the State Tax Commission, the data actually reflect business operations during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1981.

* Net local sales tax collections are amounts remitted to local units after deduction of 2% for administrative expenses.

 East Layton consolidated with Layton.

 Includes "Outside Above Municipalities" for each of the counties except Morgan County. All of Morgan County is included because there are no local unit collections.

NOTE: Above schedule shows salaries that were in effect at the beginning of the school year. In a few instances adjustments were made during the year.* Beginning with 1972-73 school year, the State began paying the employee's share of retirement costs along with the employer's share. Currently this special benefit is equal to an additional 5% of the stated salary.

* Excludes expenditures for administration and for social services.

 Beginning in January, 1974, money payments for old-age assistance, aid to the blind, and aid to the disabled were paid directly by the Federal Social Security Office.

Prior to fiscal 1962, medical assistance expenditures are not shown separately. Such medical expenditures are included in program expenditures for these earlier years.

Prepared by UTAH FOUNDATION from reports of the Utah Department of Social Services and Utah Department of Health.

a/ The code letter (Z) refers to property in the Central Weber Sewer District (code B) that is exempt from the tax imposed by the district as a result of a court order.

* Because of the overlapping boundaries of the various special districts in the state, more than one levy may apply within a municipality or school district. For example, 12 different overall mill levies are applied within Ogden City and 11 different levies are found in Salt Lake City. Actually there are 130 different taxing areas in Salt Lake County, 117 in Weber County, and 64 in Davis County. In the preceding county tabulations, the different taxing areas are designated by one or more code letters following the name of the municipality or school district. Each code letter refers to some special taxing district which imposes or is authorized to impose a levy within the district. Thus, "Weber Schools - A,B,J,K" refers to the taxing area in the Weber School District (outside of any incorporated city or town) which is in the Weber Basin Water District (A), Central Weber Sewer District (B), the Bona Vista Water District (J), and the Weber County Mosquito District (K). Of course, in addition to these taxing districts levies, the countywide levies for state schools and county purposes are applied in the described taxing area. In the case of Weber County only, the code letter (Z) refers to property located within the boundaries of the Central Weber Sewer District which is exempt from the tax levied by the district.

Due to inadequate local reporting, state assessment only is shown.
